The story tells about the kennel where Malusens mum and dad lives. How “kennel mom” looks after her dogs and why exactly she chose Regina and Rex to be Malusens mum and dad. The story also describes how Malusen grew from a little egg into a beautiful Labrador puppy in only 9 weeks. It also tell you how Malusens mum Regina gives Malusen her very first lessons in life, so that Malusen can become a good and social dog, knowing how to behave correctly.

Excerpt from the book: Malusen came into the world

“Am I really able to make Labradors?” Malusen asks.

“Yes, of course you are,” I reply. “ There will be both boys and girls, and when your puppies grow up and they get puppies, they become your grandchildren.”

“It's just like you, dad, - and with Thomas, Lasse and Christoffer,” Malusen suddenly discovers.

“Yes, exactly,” I reply. “and you know what? Malusen, my little cutie” You will have many more children and grandchildren than me, because Labradors delivers several puppies at once. Usually between eight and ten puppies! Before you know it, you have 30 children and 300 grandchildren! How would you like that?

Malusen looks a little thoughtful, and then she replies: “Dad, then we can't stay in the apartment anymore, there's not enough room. What a fuss there would be. All my children and grandchildren would eat all my food! And I don't think that there would be enough room for 330 food bowls and 330 water bowls. Don't you think that we need to consider having children and grandchildren? - I will at least”. Malusen wrinkles her brows, and it means she thinks very thoroughly.

“Well my little Malusen, I'll tell you what”, I say, “You also have close relatives just like me. You have your real mum and dad. They are called Regina and Rex, and then you have 6 cubs of sisters and brothers. Your family is gigantic and counts for more than 30 million members, spread all over the World. Your family history is more than 500 years old. ”

I continue: “Your family's history is both very sad and happy. Your family consists of the worlds best hunting dogs, and many of your family members help people. For example is the Labrador helping the police to find drugs and contraband? They help the fire department to solve fires, and they help rescue services to find survivors of earthquakes, avalanches and floods. The Labrador also works at the airport, where they sniff their way to the food that you're not allowed to bring into another country. ”

“Hey, stop dad,” Malusen interrupts, “ does my family members really do all that you're telling me? Then I must be out of a very clever dog family, right?”

“Right, Malusen,” I reply, “I actually think your family is among the most clever and smartest dogs existing.” And I continue: “but perhaps the most distinguished help they provide is assisting disabled people. The Labrador shows the direction for the blind and it helps the deaf to hear the doorbell or telephone. It assists people sitting in wheelchairs by picking things up from the floor, bringing food and drinks from the fridge. It also fills the washing machine and tumble dryer with clothes, and when it is dry it takes it out and brings it to its man. The Labrador also assists elderly people who are living in a nursing home just to bring joy into their lives. My dear little Malusen, your family's history is much more beautiful than your dad's history.”

“Wow, can we Labradors really do all that?” Malusen proudly asks.

“Yep, my dear Malusen” I reply, “it's all true what I'm telling you, and I'm quite sure that the Labrador can assist us in many other ways if only man and Labradors learned to communicate much more and in a better way.

To remain a psychological strong person, your life must be filled with joy and good experiences, but it also requires great self-confidence, and that you achieve through knowledge – and that's exactly what MalusenLand is offering. Joy and knowledge in one unity!

The two introductory main books "The Genesis of the Labrador" and "The Dogs in St. Johns", describes the actual and most fantastic story about the very close course of extinction of the Labrador, and how it was eliminated in the very last minutes. The two books and the following 30 in the series, "Fairy tales and stories of the Labrador" is written with a highly factual content in a humoristic and empathetic way, making it a true pleasure for the whole family to listen to, or read.

MalusenLand is a fantastic book-, play- and learning concept, which is based on the extremely heartbreaking, humorous and educational books about the Labrador, how it was saved from extinction, and later in the book series "Adventures and stories about the Labrador", where the stories are based on observations from Malusens life, and is written from the author's interpretation of Malusens thinking when she explores the world. This means, that the books are incredibly humorous and at the same time very educational, combined with a good portion of philosophical and thorough explanation of problem issues. I would call it hidden learning to everyday life for children.

MalusenLand has a mission: To inform children and give them a possibility to make their life blossom through joy and knowledge.

Lis Walker says: 20 % of children leave school without being able to read or write properly. It is not only the schools problem; it is a problem we are all responsible to solve.

The solution lies within the child itself: The innate desire to create and learn. Our learning material can activate children through help to self-help!
... And in a funny and exciting way!

The Malusen idea: Is to tell and teach children the importance of learning to live within a "flock" and being able to respond quickly to the verbal and non-verbal behavior and from a very early stage of their life – just like Malusen who is the focal point in all the books. It is through our books the children will be fortified with this understanding in an effortless way.

Today, children have toys and leisure activities as never seen before. That might slightly affect some of the most essential in their upbringing, namely learning the language and to behave socially correct in real life. With this in mind, it has given us the idea to create the possibility to unite play and learning, and also create a universe for children, where language is the central element. In MalusenLand language learning and other subjects is done through play, games and funny competitions, and here it will be exciting to go on adventures and absorb knowledge.
